First Lady of the Kitchen

WACO, TEXAS | Kitchen duties may have traditionally been viewed as women's work, but not at the White House. Until now: Cristeta Comerford has been named executive chef.

After a six-month search, first lady Laura Bush announced Sunday that Comerford was chosen from hundreds of applicants to head the executive kitchen. A naturalized U.S. citizen from the Philippines, she will be the first woman and first minority to hold the post.

The 42-year-old Comerford has been an assistant chef at the White House for 10 years. She worked under former executive chef Walter Scheib III, who resigned in February.

Scheib said Sunday that Comerford was hands down the best assistant he had in his 30-year career and is a wonderful choice.

While being executive chef at the White House is prestigious, the job also can be grueling. Comerford will be in charge of whipping up everything from state dinners for world leaders to munchies for the commander in chief, his family and guests. (AP)

In Gaza, A Historic First Step

Israeli troops seal border as withdrawal of settlers begins

KISSUFIM CROSSING, ISRAEL | Israel lowered a road barrier sealing the Gaza Strip to Israeli civilians at midnight Sunday — signaling the start of a historic withdrawal that will end its 38-year occupation, redraw borders and reshape prospects for Mideast peace.

Two large Israeli flags waved beside the barrier. As it went down, a traffic light changed from green to red and three vans carrying settlers and their belongings drove out of Gaza, never to return.

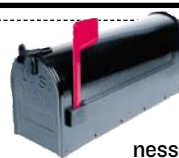

The withdrawal, marking the first time Israel will have given up settled land claimed by the Palestinians for their future state, comes after months of political wrangling and mass protests. On Sunday, Israeli troops took up positions to launch the evacuation and Palestinian security forces fanned out to prevent militant attacks.

Israel's army chief appealed to troops to show restraint in removing thousands of Jewish settlers from their homes amid concerns that resistance could turn violent after thousands of anti-pullout activists slipped into the territory.

As part of Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's withdrawal plan, Israel also will evacuate four small settlements in the northern West Bank housing some 500 people. Many hope the pullout from the territory Israel captured in 1967 will be the start of a true partition of historic Palestine between Arab and Jew. (AP)

WOOF | Mail Aggression A mail carrier was bitten by a barking man on Wednesday, police said. Mark D. Plumb, 20, of Butler, Mo., said he was just joking when he ran barking from a house and bit the letter carrier on the shoulder, police spokesman Lt. Todd Duplantis said. Plumb was arrested and charged with simple battery. He was released from jail after posting a $165 bond. Plumb has no history of criminal activity or mental illness, authorities said. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

EXPOSED

Uh, Put Me Back Under, Doc

Some people bring flowers, others bring balloons. But when Melvyn Reed's three wives showed up to visit him in his London hospital, they brought an unexpected end to his years as a polygamist. After Reed woke from his triple bypass heart operation earlier this year, his complicated marital affairs took a turn for a worse. All three of his spouses had turned up at the same time, despite his efforts to stagger their visits. Upon realizing that something was amiss, the wives held a meeting in the parking lot and learned they were all married to the same man. Reed pleaded guilty July 19 to a charge of bigamy. (AP)

CURRENCY

Dishonest Abe

Bartender Brandy Tuczynski knew the $100 bill a Lafayette, Ind., customer gave her July 31 was fake when she held it up to the light and saw Abraham Lincoln's face instead of Benjamin Franklin's on the watermark. Earl H. Devine was arrested, and, then, Tuesday, nabbed again for trying to pass the fake bills, this time at a drugstore. "The watermark on the bills don't correspond with the correct president's face," said police official Jeff Rooze. "They all have Abe Lincoln's watermark, which is on the $5 bill." Color-shifting ink and a security thread also were missing, and the paper had dots from an inkjet printer, police said. (AP)

BASEBALL

On the Jumbo-Tron

It came for the peanuts, stayed for the roster spot. Laura threw out the ceremonial first pitch Friday to West Michigan Whitecaps' catcher Chris Robinson, before the team's game in Comstock Park, Mich. The 9-foot-tall, four-ton African elephant earned cheers for being fairly accurate — flipping the ball only a little high and wide. Laura, 23, previously starred in "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls." PSYCHICS

Didn't See That One Coming

A self-professed psychic in Edinburgh, Scotland, may need a little more practice, after his crystal ball caused a fire that destroyed his apartment, Agence France Presse reported Friday. The ball was left on a windowsill, and when Herve Vandrot came home, his apartment and two others were destroyed. Firefighters determined the blaze was started by sunlight passing through the ball onto a basket of laundry. "Sunlight through glass ... acts like a magnifying glass," a spokesman said. (EXPRESS)

COCOA BEACH, FLA.

S.C. Prison Escapees Caught

Two men who escaped from a South Carolina jail while awaiting sentencing on federal bank robbery charges have been arrested on a Florida beach after a three-week manhunt, authorities said Sunday. Ted Evan Doughty and Daniel Ryan Pilson, both 21, were arrested late Saturday. The chase led authorities from Lexington, S.C., to Charlotte, N.C., to Chesapeake, Va., and Jupiter, Fla. The men stole cars and switched license plates to avoid capture, the FBI said. (AP)

Nationwide Gas Prices Hit New High

Demand expected to stay high through August

LOS ANGELES | Retail gas prices hit another record high over the past three weeks, mirroring a rapid increase in the cost of crude oil, according to a nationwide survey released Sunday.

The average price for all three grades rose nearly 20 cents to $2.53 in the three weeks ending Aug. 12, said Trilby Lundberg, who publishes the semimonthly Lundberg Survey of 7,000 gas stations around the country. The figures were not adjusted for inflation.

In the same three-week period, crude oil price futures rose about $8.21. A barrel of oil produces about 42 gallons of gasoline, resulting in a price increase of 19.6 cents per gallon — nearly identical to the 19.8 cent rise in the price of gas at the pumps, Lundberg said.

There was scant good news for consumers in the latest report.

Demand for gas will remain high through August, but should drop after Labor Day. Prices should soften after that, assuming underlying crude oil prices hold stable and refinery activity and shipments aren't interrupted by natural disasters, Lundberg said.

Still, adjusted for inflation, prices have yet to climb to the record levels reached in the 1980s. Gas prices in March 1981 would be $3.03 per gallon expressed in today's dollars, Lundberg said. GARY GENTILE (AP)

PAIN AT THE PUMP

A look at the hike in gas prices by the numbers, according to Lundberg Survey data released Sunday:

- Self-service regular averaged $2.50 a gallon nationwide. Mid-grade averaged $2.59, while premium grade was at $2.69.
- The costliest price for unleaded regular was in San Diego at $2.76 per gallon.
- The best deal for unleaded regular was found in Cheyenne, Wyo., at $2.31 a gallon.

Wyo. Town Strains to House Tornado Victims

WRIGHT, WYO. | Aid workers and volunteers descended on this small coal-mining town Sunday to offer help in the wake of a tornado that killed two people and left about 85 families homeless.

Most were staying with friends or relatives. Officials said the town of 1,500 people did not have the apartment or motel capacity to house them.

The tornado struck with just five minutes warning late Friday afternoon, cutting a quarter-mile wide path through a mobile home park on the northwest side of town, destroying more than 80 homes. Two people died and about a dozen were injured.

Public Approval Low for Bush

President pulling less support in polls than did other two-termers

WASHINGTON | President Bush's standing with an American public anxious about Iraq and the nation's direction is lower than that of the last two men who won re-election to the White House — Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton — at this point in their second terms.

But solid backing from his base supporters has kept Bush from sinking to the depths reached by former presidents Harry Truman, Richard Nixon, Jimmy Carter and Bush's father. Truman decided not to run for re-election. Nixon resigned. Carter and the first President Bush were defeated in re-election campaigns.

Bush's job approval in recent polls ranges from the low- to mid-40s. It was 42 percent in the latest AP-Ipsos poll. His ratings on everything from handling Iraq to the economy to Social Security and other domestic issues are at their lowest levels so far.

Reagan was at 57 percent at this stage of his presidency and Clinton at 61 percent, according to Gallup polling at the time. WILL LESTER (AP)

POLL POSITIONS

Other presidents whose support in the polls have waned, according to Gallup poll figures:

- Harry Truman's support dipped to 24 percent in the spring of 1951 after he removed popular Gen. Douglas MacArthur from command in Korea
- Jimmy Carter's approval plunged to 29 percent in the summer of 1979 amid economic troubles and problems with Iran
- The first President Bush's approval sank to 32 percent in July 1992 as his rivals Bill Clinton and Ross Perot gained momentum

Judge Weighs Torture Charges For Frat Members

OROVILLE, CALIF. | A judge last week raised the possibility that four fraternity members could be charged with torture in the death of a 21-year-old pledge, comparing the alleged hazing death to the torture of Iraqi prisoners by U.S. soldiers.

The torture charge carries a potential life sentence. The four members of the now-defunct Chi Tau house at Chico State University are charged with involuntary manslaughter and hazing, which carry a maximum of four years in prison.

They are accused of forcing Matthew Carrington, 21, to drink large amounts of water while performing calisthenics in the frigid basement as part of an initiation rite on Feb. 2. Carrington collapsed and died of heart failure due to water intoxication. (AP)

Cypriot Plane Crash Kills All Aboard

Officials cite technical failure in jet disaster that claims 121 lives

GRAMMATIKO, GREECE | A Cypriot plane full of vacationers slammed into a mountainside north of Athens on Sunday after at least one pilot lost consciousness from lack of oxygen, killing all 121 people aboard, more than a third of them children.

The cause of Greece's deadliest plane crash appeared to be technical failure resulting in high-altitude decompression and not terrorism, authorities said. A transport official said the 115 passengers and six crew may have been dead when the plane went down.

Helios Airways flight ZU522 was headed from Larnaca,

Family members wept in anguish as they waited at the Athens and Larnaca airports. When news of the crash emerged at Larnaca, relatives swarmed the airline counters, shouting "murderers."

A man whose cousin was a passenger told Greece's Alpha television he received a text message minutes before the crash. "He told me the pilots were unconscious. ... He said: 'Farewell, cousin, here we're frozen,'" Sotiris Voutas said indicating the plane was cold, a sign of decompression. ELENA BECATOROS (AP)

Iran Keeps Hard Line On Nukes

TEHRAN, IRAN | An increasingly defiant Iran called Sunday for Europe to open talks on Tehran's intention to enrich uranium, and dismissed a veiled Bush administration warning of military action against Iranian nuclear operations as psychological warfare.

The new Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, meanwhile, named a hard-line Cabinet, a move that could intensify Iran's confrontation with the West.

Last week, Iran rejected a U.N. nuclear agency resolution that urged it to stop converting uranium at its facility in Isfahan. Conversion is a step before enrichment, for which Iran has built facilities in Natanz.

"What is left on the table for discussion is Natanz," Mohammad Saeedi of Iran's Atomic Energy Organization told state media. (AP)

British Air Works To Clear Backlog

LONDON | British Airways pressed Sunday to resume normal service, two days after the end of a ground-crew walkout that had stranded more than 100,000 passengers.

The airline said it hoped to have its short-haul operation back to normal by Tuesday, but said it would take longer to resume normal service on its long-distance flights.

Talks were expected to continue Sunday to resolve the labor dispute with the airline's catering staff that triggered the crippling strike. (AP)

Police Detain 12 in Sri Lanka Slaying

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA | Security forces arrested 12 minority Tamils before dawn Sunday in connection with the assassination of Sri Lanka's foreign minister, and a Tamil lawmaker said only a peace deal could stop such killings in a country many fear is sliding back to war.

A Defense Ministry spokesman, Brig. Daya Ratnayake, said 11 men and one woman were detained in overnight raids by authorities, since Foreign Minister Lakshman Kadirgamar was slain late Friday.

A state of emergency went into effect within hours of the assassination, and top Sri Lankan officials warned the killing was a major setback to the fragile peace process and questioned the rebel Tamil Tigers' denial of involvement.

The Tigers began fighting in 1983 for a separate homeland for ethnic Tamils, claiming discrimination by the majority Sinhalese. (AP)

Tough Pullout Predicted From Gaza's Kfar Darom

KFAR DAROM, GAZA STRIP | There are no packing boxes, no containers, no deserted homes. Not even precious photo albums have been packed or taken away for safekeeping.

It is here, in the hard-line settlement of Kfar Darom, its population tripled by outside sympathizers, that Israeli authorities expect to meet the most militant resistance to the withdrawal from the Gaza Strip.

Kfar Darom is a zealously religious community of 500 people, isolated from the other settlements and separated from the Palestinian town of Deir el-Balah by a line of walls and fences.

Founded in 1946 as a kibbutz, it was evacuated after a three-month Egyptian siege during the 1948 Mideast War. After Israel captured the Gaza Strip in 1967, the army built a post on the site. In 1989, a group of civilians moved in.

As Tuesday's midnight deadline for leaving voluntarily looms, no family has left Kfar Darom, and people's homes stand unchanged, said Sarah Friedman, a former resident who returned from her family's home in a West Bank settlement to support her one-time neighbors. "The people of Kfar Darom aren't moving," she said. AMY TEIBEL (AP)

Iraqis Face Draft Deadline

Federalism remains divisive issue in talks for new constitution

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | With one day left to finish Iraq's new constitution, Sunni Arabs asked Sunday that the divisive issue of federalism be put off until next year so the draft can be completed on time, warning they would not accept provisions for federated states.

American officials applied pressure to resolve differences on that and other issues before Monday's deadline for parliament to adopt the constitution, and U.S. Ambassador Zalmay Khalilzad said he was convinced the Iraqis would succeed.

Some politicians said the draft could be presented to the Shiite- and Kurdish-led parliament Monday over Sunni Arab objections. But that would further alienate that disaffected minority, undercutting the U.S. goal of using the political process to take the steam out of the Sunni-dominated insurgency.

The main obstacle was the argument over federalism, which the formerly dominant Sunni Arabs fear could lead to Kurdish and Shiite Muslim regions splitting away from Iraq.

In violence, five U.S. soldiers were killed by roadside bombs over the weekend and another died in a shooting, the U.S. military announced. At least 11 Iraqis were killed Sunday in attacks across the country, police said.

Indonesia, Aceh Rebels to Sign Accord

HELSINKI, FINLAND | The Indonesian government and Aceh rebels met Sunday for last-minute talks before the signing of a peace treaty aimed at ending nearly 30 years of fighting in the oil- and gas-rich province that has killed 15,000 people.

Spurred by the need to get reconstruction aid to the Dec. 26 tsunami-ravaged region, the parties negotiated under the mediation of former Finnish President Martti

Ahtisaari, culminating in the accord they are to sign on Monday.

Details of the pact were to be released after the signing ceremony, but negotiators said it would deal with the governing of Aceh province and rebel participation in the political process. (AP)

Weekend Mired by Delays

Wilson Bridge work frustrates I-95 drivers stuck in Beltway mess

OXON HILL, MD. | Motorists headed from Maryland to Virginia across the Woodrow Wilson Bridge were met with delays throughout the weekend as paving operations kept three of four lanes closed.

"We'll wrap up sometime this evening unless there's some mechanical failure or materials come in that are unacceptable," John Undeland, a project spokesman, said on Sunday.

As temperatures soared into the 90s, crews continued building up layers of three-inch thick asphalt. The three temporary lanes connect approaches on the Maryland side of the Potomac River to three westbound lanes on the existing bridge.

While many local motorists avoided congestion that stretched for seven miles, thousands of long distance travelers faced delays of up to three hours on the Capital Beltway's Inner Loop. Signs warning of the congestion near Washington, D.C., were posted as far north as Connecticut, Undeland said.

The project, slated for completion by 5 a.m. Monday, required the surface of the roadway to be banked to handle vehicles safely. Each layer had to be allowed to cool before additional asphalt could be applied.

"The heat hasn't helped because it's required a longer cooling period between layers," Undeland said.

Bomb Hoax Prompts Hotel Evacuation

WASHINGTON | A major downtown hotel was evacuated for more than an hour Sunday after a suspicious package was discovered in the basement, but police bomb technicians found nothing dangerous inside it.

The discovery prompted bomb technicians and the FBI to evacuate about 350 guests and employees from the Mayflower Hotel on Connecticut Avenue, four blocks from the White House.

"Someone tried to make this look like a real bomb," said D.C. Fire and Emergency Medical Services Department spokesman Alan Etter.

Bomb technicians from the D.C. Metropolitan Police Department disrupted the package with a small explosive charge but found no evidence of anything dangerous inside, Etter said. (AP)

CALL WAITING: The new Opera Mini browser allows Web surfing from almost any mobile phone, even inexpensive ones with little built-in memory. It's not a reality yet, though, at least not in the U.S. — it's currently being tested in Norway.

Time to Hang Up

PHONES | Ever wonder if that spouse, friend or co-worker on the other end of the phone is really paying attention? The "Jerk-O-Meter" may hold the answer.

Researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are developing software for cell phones that would analyze speech patterns and voice tones to rate people — on a scale of 0 to 100 percent — on how engaged they are in a conversation.

Anmol Madan, who led the project while he pursued a master's degree at MIT, sees the Jerk-O-Meter as a tool for improving relationships, not ending them. Or it might assist telephone sales and marketing efforts.

"Think of a situation where you could actually prevent an argument," he said. "Just having

As a student at MIT, Anmol Madan led the project to create the Jerk-O-Meter.

this device can make people more attentive because they know they're being monitored."

The program, which Madan said is nearing completion, uses mathematical algorithms to measure levels of stress and empathy in a person's voice. It also keeps track of how often someone is speaking.

For now, the Jerk-O-Meter is set up to monitor the user's end of the conversation. If his attention is straying, a message pops up on the phone that warns, "Don't be a jerk!"

The researchers tested the technology at a bar in Cambridge where a group of singles were "speed-dating," rotating through a series of five-minute conversations.

"Mathematically modeling" each person's speaking style let the research team predict whether a speed-dater would agree to a real date. It was a good sign, Madan said, if the speed-daters engaged in "back and forth exchanges," punctuated by "ahas" and "yups."

The prototype version runs in Linux on a phone plugged into Voice over Internet service. Once the Jerk-O-Meter is completed, in six months or so, Madan envisions selling it as software that could be downloaded off the Internet.

The Jerk-O-Meter is one of many projects at MIT aiming to make cell phones and other communication devices more socially aware.

Is That Web Site Male Or Female?

GENDER | It's no secret that men and women tend to spend their time on the Internet quite differently.

But British researchers suggest it's not just a site's subject that determines whether it will draw more men or women. The appearance of the site also might play a role.

A recent study at Glamorgan University Business School showed that women seemed to like pages with more color in the background and typeface. Women also favored informal rather than posed pictures.

Men responded better to dark colors and straight, horizontal lines across a page. They also were more pleased by a three-dimensional look and images of "self-propelling" rather than stationary objects. (AP)

Mickelson Takes Lead Into 5th Day at the PGA

Final major spills over to Monday after play is called due to storms

GOLF | Phil Mickelson soared and then stumbled, and somehow finished ahead of everyone else Sunday in the PGA Championship. But thanks to storms that rolled into Baltusrol, his work is not done.

In a dynamic final round that included everything but a winner, Mickelson went from three shots ahead to two shots behind Steve Elkington in a span of seven holes, only to recover when others got swallowed up by deep rough and the pressure of trying to win the final major of the year.

Mickelson was 4 under par and had a 3-foot par putt on the 14th hole when the final round was called off for the rest of the day. Twelve players will return at 10 a.m.

"This is a tremendous advantage, I think," Mickelson said. "Hopefully some rain will maybe soften it up a bit."

No one could have imagined Mickelson would struggle after the way he started.

And no one could have guessed that Tiger Woods would have the best 72-hole score at the end of Sunday.

Woods finished with birdies on the last two holes for a 2-under 68, putting him at 2-under 278, two shots behind.

"I had a wonderful four tournaments," Woods said of this year's majors. DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

NATIONALS | Not feeling his best, John Patterson was still good enough to beat Colorado.

Patterson won his third straight start with eight innings of one-run ball, and the Washington Nationals completed a three-game sweep of the Rockies with a 9-2 victory Sunday.

"I wasn't very comfortable on the mound today at all, and I didn't have the command that I have had for most of this year," Patterson said.

With less than his normal arsenal, Patterson (7-3) allowed nine hits, struck out five, walked two and lowered his ERA to 2.44. He

"I knew that I had to mix up my pitches so they couldn't just sit on a fastball, and really I think what I did have for location got me through today," Patterson said.

Nick Johnson hit a three-run homer and Jose Guillen added a solo shot for the Nationals. Guillen, who had two hits and two RBIs, has hit 20 of his 21 home runs on the road. Former Colorado outfielder Preston Wilson, acquired by Washington in July, had two hits and drove in two runs. The series sweep was Washington's seventh this season.

"These guys threw us a beating for three days," Colorado manager Clint Hurdle said. "They threw us a beating pitching and hitting." (AP)

Raffy Powerless in Return to Lineup

ORIOLES | It might be a while before Rafael Palmeiro regains his home run swing, and it will probably take a little longer for Baltimore Orioles fans to completely forgive him.

Palmeiro went 0-for-4 in his first game since returning from a 10-day suspension for using steroids, making the final out with two runners on Sunday in Baltimore's 7-6 loss to the Toronto Blue Jays.

Orioles supporters welcomed back Palmeiro with a mixed response, but many of those remaining in the crowd of 30,954 began chanting "Raffy!

Palmeiro makes Sunday's last out. JOE GIZIA/REUTERS

Raffy!" as he stepped to the plate in the ninth inning.

Facing closer Miguel Batista, Palmeiro sent a routine fly to right field, the only time all afternoon he hit the ball out of the infield.

Palmeiro returned to the Orioles on Thursday, but interim manager Sam Perlozzo waited until Sunday to finally put him in the lineup.

The Orioles were seeking to win a second straight series for the first time since early May, but Toronto snapped a 4-all tie with a three-run eighth. DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

WHAT A RUSH: Rush Limbaugh, who once commented that Eagles quarterback Donovan McNabb was overrated because he was black, now says he wants to help McNabb and wide receiver Terrell Owens settle their differences on his radio show.

Redskins Face Offensive Situation

After Panthers game, 'Nowhere else to go but up'

REDSKINS | Clinton Portis tried his best to make the argument that the offensive struggles of the Washington Redskins are no big deal. There "shouldn't be any concerns," he said, adding that it's only the preseason and that everyone's trying to adjust to new players.

The running back then completed his optimistic yarn by saying, "We have nowhere else to go but up."

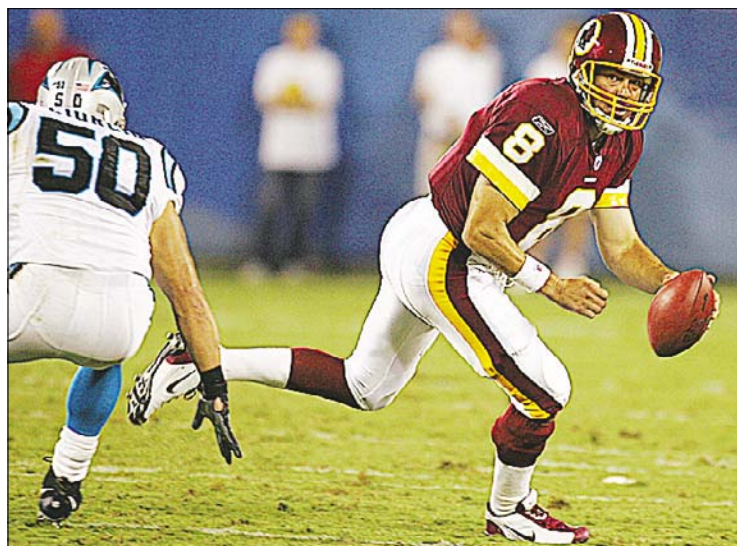

If nothing else, he got that last part right.

The Redskins have struggled to move the ball against their own defense almost every day in practice. The Ravens sacked quarterback Patrick Ramsey four times in a scrimmage. Then, in Saturday's 28-10 loss to Carolina, Ramsey and the first-team offense failed to produce a point in five drives over nearly two quarters — even with the Panthers phasing their starters out of the game during the third drive. Ramsey finished 8-for-12 for 77 yards for a quarterback rating of 49.7.

"We're not satisfied," coach Joe Gibbs said Sunday. "We've got a long ways to go here. I think the game pointed that out."

Fans heartily booed Mark Brunell last year, but he will become an enticing alternative if he continues to play better than Ramsey. Against the Panthers — albeit with the second-string — Brunell moved calmly in the pocket and worked the ball downfield like a veteran, the kind of performance expected but not delivered a year ago. He produced two scoring drives and finished 11-for-19 for 121 yards before yielding to rookie Jason Campbell in the fourth quarter.

"Mark came out very, very aggressive," Gibbs said. (AP)

Despite Troubles, Stewart Wins Again at The Glen

NASCAR | A broken alternator couldn't keep Tony Stewart from blowing away the field one more time.

Faced with a problem right at the end of a race he dominated, Stewart simply snookered the opposition on the final two restarts and cruised to his fifth victory in seven races. And his dominant performance Sunday at Watkins Glen International padded his lead in the NASCAR Nextel Cup standings.

Still, he had to hope he had enough juice left after a late caution forced two extra laps. Stewart radioed in that he had an alternator problem, forcing him to shut off some systems and switch to a backup battery. Then he sprinted away from Robby Gordon on the final restart. DICK BRINSTER (AP)

Kids on Camera

JATAWNY MUCKELVENE, 26

JOB: Self-employed photographer (jatawnyvisionmemories.com)

SALARY: About $100 an hour, plus extra for prints

EDUCATION: Studied at the National Conservatory of Dramatic Arts in Washington, D.C.

WHAT SHE DOES: After her son Kardan, right, was born nine months ago, Muckelvene switched from shooting fashion to photographing kids and families. And no, that didn't mean swapping one breed of tantrum-thrower for another. "A fashion model is more difficult to work with than a child," said Muckelvene, who starts every shoot "by just being around" her subjects, until pretty soon they're "running around like normal." She takes a documentary approach to her work, shooting on location rather than in a studio. So even if a kid is grumpy, that's OK: "There's no 'stand here,' no posing, no awkwardness," she said. "Whether the kids are pouting or laughing — that's the moment I'm looking to capture." Two weeks after a session, she shows the customers a proof list and they choose their photos; then she does touch-ups and corrects the colors until "everything is perfect."

WOULD YOU WANT HER JOB? Probably — it's a fun job. But would your clients want you? "People are really picky and they want the best. Nobody wants a snapshot," she said. "People get into photography for all kinds of reasons: They think they'll meet women, or they want to start up their own business, or they want to make their own hours ... but if you're not careful, you'll ruin someone's memories."

HOW YOU CAN GET HER JOB: Practice. Time spent experimenting with a camera is more valuable than any class or book, said Muckelvene. How fast you learn, though, will depend a lot on whether it clicks. "You know how there are those musicians who take an instrument with no school, they just pick it up and play it? Photography is a lot like that," she said. If you want to go solo, it costs a lot to get a business started — up to $15,000, she estimated.

LIVE ONLINE

AMY JOYCE's column appears Sundays in The Washington Post. She chats every Tuesday at 11 a.m. on washingtonpost.com/liveonline.

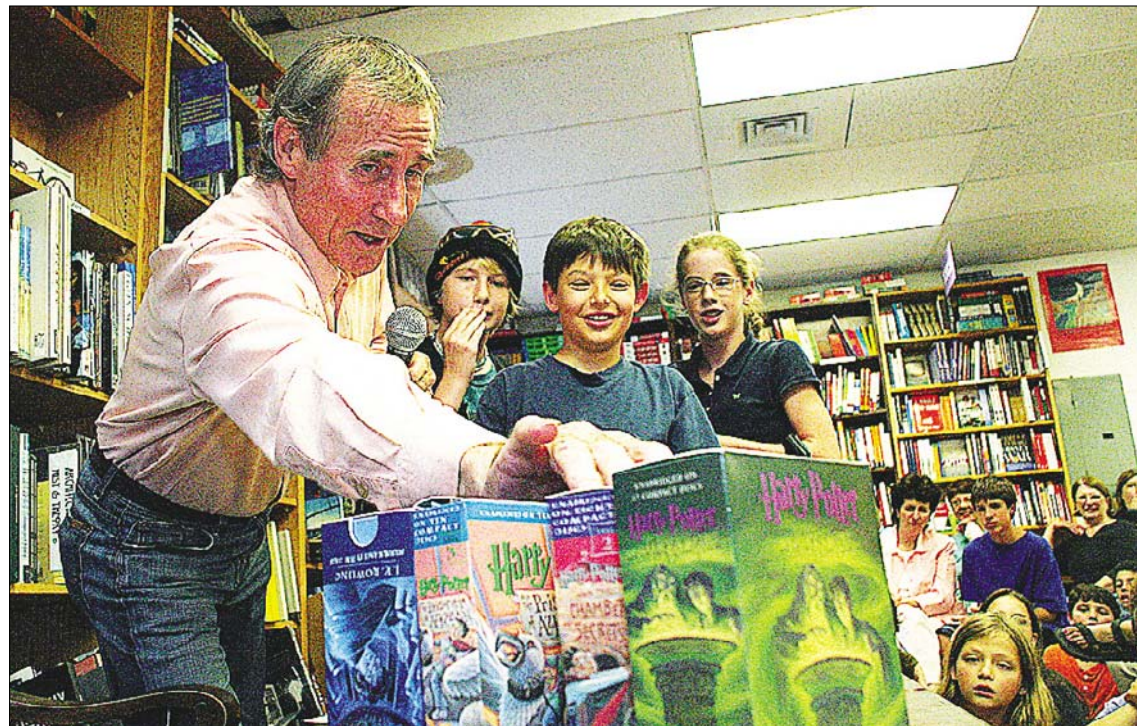

What are your thoughts on people bringing their pets to work? When our CEO is out of the office, his executive assistant will bring her small dog and birds into the office. The pets roam the halls and are both disruptive and dirty (there have been "accidents" in common areas and personal offices). I can only assume that she has permission to do this because no one stops her, and we don't have an HR department to help.

It seems odd that she would only do this when the CEO is out of the office, no? Meaning she might not have permission. You should simply tell her you think it's inappropriate, and you'd appreciate it if she kept her animals either at home or at her desk because it's disrupting your work. If she reacts poorly, ask the CEO if something can be done about it. If the CEO says that she is permitted to have them there, then ask the CEO if the assistant can then keep her pets at her desk. I think the CEO will try to stop anything that might be negatively affecting your work.

BROTHERLY LOVE: John Singleton's drama "Four Brothers," starring Mark Wahlberg and Andre Benjamin, topped the weekend box office. The Kate Hudson haunter "Skeleton Key" came in second; "Deuce Bigalow: European Gigolo" opened at a limp No. 5.

SOUND ARTIST: Dale's vocal characterization of the "Potter" landscape is almost as beloved as the books themselves.

A Master's Voice

Jim Dale brings Harry Potter alive for young and old fans

SECRET SUCCESS | At a Los Angeles appearance, Jim Dale scrunches his face in a sneer and lets out a gurgling, brusque voice that transforms the 69-year-old British actor into the large, beefy, purple-faced Aunt Marge, a minor character in the "Harry Potter" series.

The crowd sits rapt as Harry unleashes his magic on the drunk and villainous Aunt Marge, inflating her like a balloon and making her fingers fat as salamis.

Dale has given voice to more than 200 characters in the audio versions of the six "Harry Potter" books published so far. The first five audio books in the series smashed previous sales records with more than 4 million copies sold in North America.

Although the "Harry Potter" audio books Dale worked on — for which he's garnered much praise — have become blockbusters, his schedule is far from glamorous. Because of tight security restrictions on the latest in the series, "Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince," he received only 100 pages of the manuscript at a time. He color-coded the characters and had to devise voices for the new ones practically overnight, keeping track of them on a tape recorder.

"I was the only one in America with the book [in manuscript form]," Dale said.

Dale is not often recognized in public, but as he ordered at a McDonald's recently, a couple of kids recognized his voice. Dale finished placing his order as Hogwarts headmaster Albus Dumbledore.

He says he is inspired by other actors, using the late John Houseman's precise and deliberate speech to create Dumbledore's voice. But he also finds muses in everyday situations.

As he pushed into a crowded elevator one day, Dale heard a squeaky voice come from below.

"Excuse me, sir, could you take your bum out of my face?"

Dale turned around to encounter a very short man, and the voice of Dobby the house elf was born.

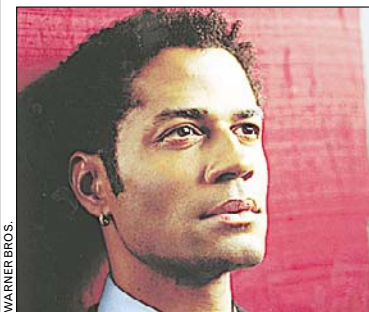

With a career in entertainment spanning more than 53 years, Dale has excelled on stage and as a songwriter. Still, he believes his "Harry Potter" recordings will become his strongest legacy.

"People are beginning to realize that this is another 'Peter Pan' or 'Alice in Wonderland,'" he said. "It will be there forever; not only my grandchildren but their grandchildren will read it and that's amazing."

The New, Self-Cleaning Staind

Too much polish takes the shine off the nu-metal quartet

MUSIC | Say goodbye to Staind's beautiful ragged edges. On their latest album, "Chapter V" (Flip/Atlantic), the band's signature pained sound, fueled by Aaron Lewis' soul-searching vocals, comes off as shiny, with a bit too much studio polish.

It's sad to hear Staind rely on cliché guitar work and over-the-top hooks. Lewis is one of the most talented vocalists in rock, but he's reworking tired territory here. "Paper Jesus" is an exception. It contains some furiously paced segments with Lewis searching for truth in a world dominated by the pretense of order. But even this standout track loses steam as Lewis goes after faceless corporations and lies from the big mysterious "they."

When Staind first bum-rushed the scene with "Dysfunction," they were second to none in power, pace and emotion. Now they've leaned on David Bottrill (Godsmack, Mudvayne) for producing and remixing. Did Bottrill tell them, "Here are the chords kids like to hear. Play them?"

If so, they shouldn't have.

Fox Clears Abdul

After investigating, network stands by 'American Idol' judge

HER GOOD NAME | "American Idol" judge Paula Abdul will remain with the hit Fox TV series after an investigation found no proof that she had an affair with a contestant or helped him on the talent show, the network said.

Lawyers who investigated claims by former contestant Corey Clark of a sexual relationship with Abdul could not substantiate his allegations, Fox said Friday.

"Paula Abdul, therefore, can continue as a judge on 'American Idol,'" the network and series producers said in a statement.

But "an enhanced non-frater-nization policy" will be added to prevent future incidents that could appear to call into question the relationship between judges, contestants or any others connected to "American Idol," they said.

"I'm grateful this ordeal is over, and I'm so looking forward to getting back to the job I love," Abdul said in a statement. "Once again, I thank my fans from throughout the world for their undying love and support."

Clark's allegations, which Abdul denied, cast a shadow over American television's most-watched show, a water-cooler phenomenon that has become a key part of Fox's ratings success. The claims first surfaced in a tabloid story and were then detailed in an ABC News report.

Last month, Fox announced that it hired independent counsel to look into the issue. LYNN ELBER (AP)

The strange kick bike draws stares and gives good workout

It looks like the bastard child of a bicycle and a scooter: a bike-size front wheel and handlebars, but no seat or pedals, just a rectangular aluminum deck and a wee rear wheel. To make it go, you kick, kick, kick. Switch feet. And kick some more. They call it a kick bike. The weird hybrid is popular in Europe, and now it's making inroads in the United States.

Skeptics abound. "Well, I guess it beats riding the bus," scoffed a bicyclist who recently passed a kick biker on the Capital Crescent trail.

Actually, it does beat riding the bus. Even a beginner, covering a mile in six minutes or so, would probably outpace the #34 as it grinds up Wisconsin Avenue during rush hour.

A Finnish medical student invented the kick bike to give marathoners a low-impact but challenging workout alternative. Distributor Roger Behrendt, who sells mail-order in the United States via kickbikeamerica.com, has shipped out about 1,200 so far this year — five or 10 a day, twice as many if there's an article in the paper or a TV spot. They start at $289 (plus shipping), and a bike shop typically charges $40 or so to assemble one.

Balancing isn't hard. After all, you're standing on a platform as opposed to sitting on a seat high above the ground. And kicking is blissful — with one knee slightly bent, you extend the other leg backward, a motion that is a close cousin to a hamstring stretch. You do have to be moderately coordinated to carry off the foot switch, though. You can slide one on the deck while taking the other off, or, if you dare, go for a hop and switch. Kick bikers tell tales of stumbles caused by a hasty hop. And please, keep your shoelaces tied tight and tucked into your shoes.

Different bikers develop different kick patterns. Behrendt suggests six to nine per foot before switching legs. Californian Jim Delzer, who in July kicked across the entire United States in 20 days, goes for around 20. Both men agree that for uphill climbs, fewer kicks per side give the best boost.

A top athlete like Delzer can hit speeds of 60 mph on a descent,

The X Country ($389) is for extreme offroading kick bikers.

The Sport Classic ($329) is a light, multipurpose kick bike.

Kick This Habit

finds kick-biking more strenuous than regular cycling. You just can't build up the same momentum as you would on a conventional cycle.

He's happy to report that he's been injury free. "The only time I've had problems is if I really go just superhard and pound my foot on the ground too hard," he said. Now he builds speed with a lighter kick off. Well-padded shoes also help.

Teenage boys seem to have a special affinity for the kick bike, at least judging by the response we've received: "What's that called?" "How does it work?" And the inevitable "Awesome."

But the kick bike is a vehicle for all ages. Behrendt recently sold a kick bike to a Vermonter who wanted to give it to his 79-year-old wife. And he got the idea from a townie who takes a regular 18-mile round trip ride on her biped. At 90, she's still kicking. MARC SILVER

Discoveries

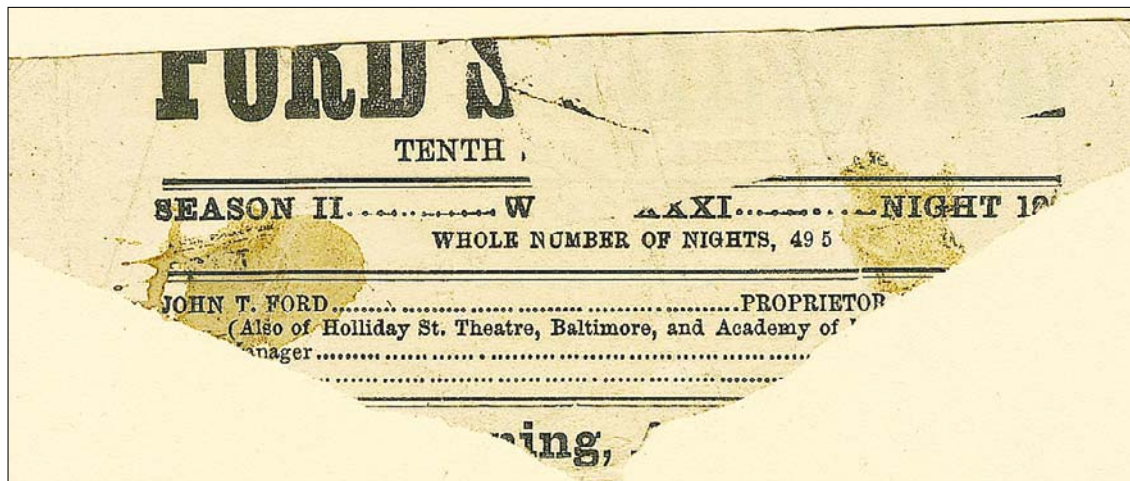

Quirks and rarities lie buried in the records of the copyright office

There's a home movie of Marilyn Monroe swinging a golf club. And Michael Jordan playing basketball — in junior high. There's the score of an operetta by John Philip Sousa, the march king.

College students who spent their summer combing through old copyright records have discovered a trove of historical oddities.

The Library of Congress, home of the nation's copyright office, says the finds won't be shown publicly right away. Some await clearance from the copyright-holders before they can be exhibited.

A bystander soaked up the blood from a dying Abraham Lincoln with a Ford's Theatre program. He would later copyright it.

Ford's Theater for April 14, 1865.

It was researched by one of the special interns selected for the project, Mary Brazelton, a Harvard University student from Washington's Maryland suburbs. She found that one member of the play's audience that night — T.D. Bancroft — saved the fragment and later wrote that the dark stains were blood that dripped from President Lincoln as he was carried out of the theater after being shot.

Bancroft wrote about his treasure in a pamphlet issued to celebrate Lincoln's 100th birthday, preserved among the library's rare books. He donated the stained fragment to the Kansas Historical Society, and took the precaution of copyrighting a photo of it.

Copyright is enshrined in the U.S. Constitution, along with patents. And while patents and the legal help required to get one may cost thousands of dollars, a copyright application costs only $30.

"Patents protect how a thing works," said Jule Sigall, an attorney who works on policy and international relations at the Copyright Office. "Copyright protects how things look."

More than 31 million copyrights have been issued since 1790. Each of the records from before 1978 is recorded on a small card, some 44 million cards in all.

The cards are preserved in 25,675 drawers that occupy 9,354 square feet of office space in the library's James Madison Building.

The students who did the treasure hunt recently organized a small private showing of the results, but public display is a different matter where copyright is concerned. Eventually the library hopes to put a selection on its Web site, but for now it is being cautious because copyrights, like patents, are often sold or inherited. CARL HARTMAN (AP)

Baby Got Black

 You'll see it in cozy, textured fall pieces

BLACK IS GOING TO BE WHITE HOT this fall. There's nothing basic about the newest versions of fashion's favorite standby. The black garments that designers and retailers are embracing are rich, textured and luxe, yet more cozy than sleek. Envision velvet blazers and fur-trim boots. Soft cashmere sweaters and feather dance skirts — all in not-so-basic black.

Black is the basis for two important looks, according to Sally Singer, Vogue's fashion news director. "The interesting thing about black this season is that it's either used as a pop art basic against white, a '60s look that shows the graphic nature of black and white. ... Or, you see a mixing of textures and tones of black. Black velvet, black gauze, black silk or viscose."

Black is never "out." But this fashion cycle it's certainly more "in" than in the past few seasons, which favored brighter shades.

Some outstanding looks from the fall fashion shows were a black cashmere-sequin strapless dress with a grid pattern from Calvin Klein Collection; an ombre beaded gown in black silk charmeuse and tulle from Michael Kors; and a black satin gown with sheer black straps and velvet trim around the bust by Oscar de la Renta.

"This black is not to erase yourself or to look thinner or to look like an urban soldier. It's more sensual, textural," Singer explains. "It's not 'Matrix-y' black. This is cozy old black, like 'Italian grandmothers' funeral' black."

Cars

It's a '5-Door' Not a Hatchback

You've seen them zipping through the streets of Europe as you attend the shows in Milan and Paris. Relive that experience stateside with this chic and sporty five-seater (don't call it a hatchback). The 2005 AUDI A3 not only fits in the tightest of city parking spaces; it'll also afford you a comfortable drive out to the Hamptons when the copter's not available. Opt for the sport package, which comes with 17-inch wheels and a stiffened suspension, and what you have is a car that will quickly become a fashion industry leader. Starting at $25,000; fashionably equipped for around $32,000. Available at Audi dealerships nationwide. (THE DAILY)

Beauty

Wash Away the Bad, But Keep the Good

Summer soaps are tricky. You want something to wash away sweat and grime, but a harsh cleanser can strip your skin of natural oils — a huge no-no when your face is already dry from tanning and summer heat. Rescue your dermis with JUICE BEAUTY'S CLEANSING MILK ($22 at Sephora), an all-natural wash which refreshes your face without wiping away the good stuff. Made with botanical oils and fruit extracts, the cleanser makes skin glow, and its hints of raspberry extract will sweeten up your skincare routine. Bonus: It's also great for washing off sand and salt water from a day at the beach. (THE DAILY)

WILLIAM GOLDEN, president of IntelligenceCareers.com, discussed government contractor jobs and security clearances on Friday | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

I already have a top secret security clearance. I was thinking about seeing a therapist to deal with some emotional issues. Should I notify my agency's office that handles security clearances? Will this affect my security clearance renewals?

You have no choice BUT to be honest. If a security officer found out that you met with a therapist and didn't report it then you would probably have your clearance pulled immediately. On the other hand, it should not be a problem for you if you report it. What is important is whether the government believes that your mental state is unstable. Having a few problems that need to be worked out should not be of concern.

My boyfriend has a security clearance. I'm a foreign-born national who has been in this country for 20 years. I think he is worried about my not being a citizen and his clearance. Is he right to be worried?

Your boyfriend is very right to be worried. Bottom line: he needs to apply for permission to marry you. This can take six to nine months. If he marries you before that he will/should lose his clearance immediately. There is also no guarantee that he will get permission.

What are the different levels of clearance? If someone was arrested for underage drinking, does that mean they can't get a clearance? Underage drinking? If you are just 21 or 22 then it might be a problem. But if the underage drinking was five, 10, 15 years ago and you've been a good kid ever since then it won't be a problem. The levels of clearance that have "market value" are Department of Defense "Secret" and "Top Secret SSBI or SI or SCI or SBI".

As a person with epilepsy, I can't join the military. Wouldn't you say that this makes it more difficult for me to get a clearance?

There are companies and government agencies searching for you. Most major federal contractors and government agencies have hiring targets for minorities and folks with disabilities. Epilepsy should not be a major concern with industry and the government.

Spare Us the Teen's Rhetoric

I'M DISGUSTED that Express would reprint a quote like "I hope Cindy Sheehan gets heatstroke, hit by a truck or bit by a rattlesnake while she protests outside of my friend's ranch" (Blog Log, Aug. 12) What were you thinking? This blog is credited to a 15-year-old kid. As reprehensible as his words are, at 15 he probably doesn't fully understand what he's saying and is just parroting what his ignorant parents tell him. You should be ashamed.

Frothing at the Keyboard

I WAS DISGUSTED by the poisonous attack on Cindy Sheehan published Friday, but I hope it opens people's eyes to how crazy some Iraq war advocates have become. Sheehan draws this rabid response simply because she wants to ask President Bush whether her son died in vain. Even those who don't support her quest should muster the human decency not to call her names or hope for her death. As casualties mount and it appears increasingly likely that Iraq will be ruled by an Islamic theocracy allied with Iran, can anyone blame her for wondering what we're doing over there?

"Over the last 5 years my hair continued to become thinner and thinner. I was so self-conscious of my image. Out of desperation I tried every treatment known in the hair industry. Finally, help was on the way after seeing in the EXPRESS newspaper an ad for Trichology/Hair Solutions of VA. I decided to schedule an appointment. This was a great decision, because after 3 months, seeing is believing!"
